

Irene Oberbauer of San Diego County Credit Union
Selected for 'Women Who Mean Business' Award

Irene Oberbauer, President & CEO of San Diego County Credit Union®, the largest locally based financial institution, has been selected as an honoree for a 'Women Who Mean Business' award by the San Diego Business Journal, a weekly newspaper in San Diego, California.

Once a year, the San Diego Business Journal recognizes key women in San Diego and spotlights their success and career achievement. Oberbauer was one of 30 distinguished honorees among 167 total nominations. Each of the 30 honorees were called up on stage and given their award at a luncheon attended by more than 800 people. The keynote speaker at the luncheon was Meg Whitman, former eBay President & CEO and California gubernatorial candidate. Also in attendance were San Diego Mayor Jerry Sanders and San Diego County Sheriff William Gore.

Oberbauer's 'Women Who Mean Business' award complements another recent accolade. She was recently selected as a member of 'Who's Who in Banking & Finance' in San Diego County, a list compiled by the San Diego Daily Transcript, a local business newspaper. Oberbauer was the standout President & CEO from a credit union. Others on the list included Bank Presidents & CEOs.
